Many of the relatives and friends of Mrs. Alva Whitsette Egppert will be saddened to learn of her death which occurred at her lonely home at Odessa, Mo., Nov. 2. She will be remembered by many as the lovely niece of Uncle Joe Whitsette, deceased, who with him visited relatives here some years ago. During her stay she made many friends, who will fondly cherish her memory. She was married in the fall of 1890 to Dr. Egppert, of Odessa who is heart broken by the loss of a devoted wife. One little boy 4 years old is left to mourn the loss of a dear good mother. E. W. C.

18-4t MRS. EMMA G. HANLEY.

Mrs. Millie Alexander aged 75 years, died suddenly Saturday night at the residence of Joe Jurley on East Main street from heart disease. She had called to see Mrs. Turley, who is quite sick, and had not been there long when she grew sick and reclined on the bed, she had not slept long when some one went to wake her and found her dead. She was a good christian woman. She lived with Mr. William Alexander on Stepstone. She was buried in the family burying ground near Stepstone yesterday afternoon.

A protracted meeting is in progress at the M. E. Church, South. Rev. J. O. A. Vaughn will preach every day at 3 p. m. and 7:15 p. m. until further notice. The public is invited to attend these services.

The two most critical times in a woman's life are the times when she makes the girl a woman, and the woman a mother. At these times Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is of incalculable value. It strengthens and invigorates the organs, diminishes inflammation, checks unnatural, exhausting drains, and puts the whole delicate organism into perfect condition. Almost all the ills of womanhood are traceable to some form of what is known as "female complaint." There are not three cases in a hundred of woman's peculiar diseases that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will not cure.

ALL FOR LOVE.

Brandon Cloud, author, sat on the edge of his bed and gazed in dismal despair at the upturned sole of his boot.

On the table lay an almost completed novel, whose progress had received a dual check. Firstly, the supply of paper had become exhausted, which, secondly, allowed the author time to think of the woman he loved, and this always made him so utterly miserable that he could not bring his thoughts to bear upon anything but the apparent hopelessness of the state of man.

"Well, Brandon, my boy," he mused bitterly, "you've reached the end at last. Assured 10 cents; half-ties, and poor stomach and a laundry's bill of $50."

He had thought of suicide before, but he was young and clung to life, had as it was, living more on hope than substance.

The only other alternative was starvation, and this he considered worse still. He could not have labored manually if he had got work to do, for having been born in the purple he had always counted poverty out of his life, so had learned no trade. He dropped into his chair again and tried to think of the girl of his dreams. How beautifully smooth it read. What a grand plot it was, and what a character was the poor, struggling, ambitious loving journalista! "A Fin de Siecle Fool." Ah, if he could but finish it! No more starvation, no more lying to widow landladies, no more dreaming of the woman he loved, but would not marry.

While he sat thinking of what might be there came a knock at the door so timid that he did not notice it until it was repeated thrice.

"The landlady," he thought, with a sort of smile.

However, it was not the portly form of the widow that met Brandon's gaze when the door opened, but a sweet little vision of a girl enwrapped in sables. He started to his feet with an exclamation as she came into the room, the smile on her face lighting up the apartment like a sun.

"My dear Minnie," he cried as he offered her a chair and relieved her of her muff and boa, "what in the world induced you to come here?"

"Curiosity and—love, eh?"

"Curiosity—Seven-eights of a woman's nature. It has ruined many a woman and—"

"Now it's going to save a man," she interposed, with a smile, which died from her eyes as she glanced around the room. "You don't appear to be very comfortable, and no fire. You said in your letter you were making your fortune. That is true."

Brandon was seated on the edge of the table looking at nothing in particular.

"Perfectly," he answered, shifting uneasily. "Only, you know, Minnie, it's slow work. There are so many at the game, and I never was clever."

"You have grown pessimistic. Poor Brandon!" and she caught his hands. "How cold you are! Why don't you have a fire?"

The author did not answer.

"Oh, I understand," she said in a low, sympathetic voice. "No wood, no coals, no money, eh?" And she caressed his hand fondly. "You have not made much progress in the royal road."

"Don't you understand, Minnie, I have endeavored to earn my own living honestly, endeavored to be independent of any man, and I want to continue so. There are enough parasites in the world. It has been a bit of a struggle, I'll admit, but I have grown accustomed to it."

"Brandon," was Minnie's solemn response, "I want to show you the folly of your independence. Did you think I could read you between the lines of your letter to me? A man who is making his fortune, or who is earning a living and has hopes for the future does not implore the woman he loves to forget him and marry some other man. Brandon, do you know?" She placed her hands upon his shoulders and looked up into his face.

He shut his eyes for a moment, his lips quivered, and he did not speak, but he smoothed her fair hair softly.

"Then you will come away with me?" she pleaded. "You will sink your foolish spirit of pride and independence and make me a happy woman?" And she nestled her head upon his arm.

"Not long ago, when you were rich, you lived as though you were to be married, but when you lost your all in those wretched companies they would not be my husband, though my fortune is ample for both."

"I wish I could swallow my wretched pride, but I cannot. I could not live on your money in your house. My inmost feelings would cry shame at me. My position would be unbearable."

Minnie shivered.

"You are cold?" he asked.

She nodded.

"Well, you had better be going."

And he handed her her rags. "It is kind and good of you, Minnie, but I'll try a little longer for that fortune." And the ghost of a smile lingered on his face for an instant.

"I suppose I could not help you in any way, Brandon? May I leave my checkbook?"

The question was put very hesitatingly, and while the inner man cried "Yes" in piteous accents the outer gentleman declined the kind offer with a courteous firmness.

"I have read several of your short stories, Minnie," said as she pulled on her gloves, "and think they are really clever. But you ought to try something big—a three volume novel."

"They are going out of fashion, and besides they take such a time. One can scribble off short stories like nursery rhymes, and the return is quick."

He referred to the return of the manuscripts. She thought he meant payment.

"But here," he went on rapidly, going to the table and taking up his unfinished book. "This is how I have been completed. None of the ordinary driver, but realism, and that is the demand of the hour. It will not be more than 40,000 words, and I am confident of its success."

"When you finish your book, Brandon," she advised, "send it to Irvine & Irvine. They will publish it in their 'Fin de Siecle' series."

You will have an eccentric, idiotic poster all to yourself in the new art style, and the puzzle of the hour will be: 'What is the writer's name? Is it a he or a she?' Then, when the public critics you, you will be praised all over the world, your real name will be discovered. Interviewers will regard you as a special prize. Your photo will be attempted in the evening news sheets, and you will be famous."

Her throat burned while she spoke. Her voice was very dry and her bonhomie artificial.

"Goodby, goodby!"

"Kiss me, Brandon—a last kiss."

He bent and pressed his lips to hers and turned quickly away as she hurried down stairs and headed out at his hair as he was leaving the most miserable man on earth.

It was about a week later, and Brandon was still in his lodgings. His landlady had informed him after Minnie's visit that some one had settled a long standing debt, so he need not worry over his little account. He blessed her. She passed the blessing on to Minnie Horton.

He sat at the table endeavoring to think out his novel, but he could not compose a single sentence, for on the news sheet spread out before him there was a photograph of a paragraph which had paralyzed all the energy in him. Minnie was to be married. She had sat on him at his word and would wed young Percy Oloot in three months.

Well, that ended it. The one ray of hope that had made his existence bearable had been flashed from his life, and death was the only panacea. Poison, hanging, drowning or a bullet—anything to get out of the world quickly. And he had loved her so much! Of course it was his own choice. If he could only have conveniently murdered his pride and honor, his soul would have been happy with the woman he loved, but he could not and now he could not live.

Thus ran his reflections, when the landlady brought him a letter, written on perfumed yellow paper. He recognized the handwriting at once. It was from Minnie and confirmed the newspaper item. She retained his ring as a keepsake.

"Do not give way to ridiculous passion," she advised him, and his face hardened as he read the words again. "Not he! Why should he?"

His life was suddenly extinguished. His hopes dispelled because he had lost the love of one whom he had seen scores of others—all beautiful, all loving, all good—no, not good—and when he was fatigued! He had struck the right chord, and his whole being sprang into a furious blaze of ambition—a desire to cheat the woman that he thought had jilted him and laugh at her mockery and triumph.

He walked his room feverishly. His hands clenched and his lips set tight, while the fire of ambition forged his determination and won his love. By heavens! he would be famous! Day after night he worked at his manuscript until it was finished and then—then his triumph.

That was it. Work, work and forgot her, and he pitched the dainty note into the fire and commenced. He unfroze. All his energies returned, all his thoughts rushed back upon him, and he flew over each other as his pen raced across the paper. In a few days his book was ready for the publishers.

Brandon received a reply from Irvine & Irvine within two days. This was a revelation that astounded him. But what surprised him still more was the fact that the publishers wished to see him.

Brandon works merrily on; writes four hours each day and sells each book as soon as it is finished. Strange to relate, many of his works are out of print. Though paid for, they have never been published. Occasionally, he determines to print to obtain the results of his efforts, but when they meet by such scandalous conduct, but when this fit seizes him Minnie always has something for him to do, and he always does it.

It was a noisy summer, just too hot so hasty. Brandon thought, as he summed Irvine's smile time after time. Fortune and fame were written all over him, but if he only had her!

At least he ought to write and congratulate her on her engagement. He wondered with a mean exultation what she would feel like—if she would turn white when she read of his success. So he sat down to write, but remembering that all eggs did not turn out chicks, he deferred it until the next day, the publication of Grief that had learned the uneasiness of And bitter calm of weariness and pain.

A human heart speaks to us from the past. From the vast stillness, in whose unknown deep, we, too, so often plunge and swim. We, too, are the mocking skids hurried back again, by my brother's hand, to that at last. The perfect peace of quiet, dreamless sleep. Sleep on, for surely, dreams sleep best.

—J. West Roosevelt in Bachelor of Arts

Wrote

After emerging from the forest we found ourselves suddenly on the margin of the lake, and of this all description must fail utterly. The object itself must be seen to be enjoyed. Words cannot convey the wonderful and sublime scenery of the place and its surroundings.

The altitude of the lake above the level of the sea is 8,000 feet. The crater is about seven miles long by five wide. The waters of the lake are below the rim 2,000 feet, with a sheer pitch of the banks down to it, making the water of the lake about 6,000 feet above sea level. A little to the left, and rising to a height of 1,000 feet is an island covered with timber. It is supposed to be the cone of the crater. The island is about three miles from the near shore. There are some rocks jutting out from the rim, which form a ledge or shelf for a short distance, which makes a very good point of observation. There is a solitary trail zigzagging down the side of the crater; but, although two of our party undertook the descent, it is a very dangerous trip from the risk of the numerous boles, being located from time to time, and lightning falls, falling upon the person of the explorer and which would crush him into a shapeless mass. Those who were foolhardy enough to make the descent on returning said they would hardly attempt it a second time.

The water of the lake is the bluest of blue, but without a living thing in it. As far as we could learn, it has no outlet or inlet, and the rise and fall of the water from the melting of the snow and evaporation is about five or six inches.—Portland Oregonian.

When the Jews Had Three Eyes.

The Jews of eastern Palestine and Asia Minor have a queer tradition which has survived from ancient times and tells of a remote period in their history when every fully developed Israelite was equipped with three perfect eyes. The two normal eyes were situated in front of the nose, just as Jewish and other eyes are today, but the third—the one that made the early patriarch a monstrosity—was located in the back part of his head, just above the nape of the neck in the edge of the hair. This wonderful third eye in man was not "evolved" out of existence, as useless organs generally are (according to the ideas of the progressive scientists), but was closed by divine injunction on the day when Moses was given the tables of stone on Sinai.

You remember that God's command on the day when the tables were removed was to the effect that no man should be seen in the vicinity of the holy mount. See Exodus xxxiv, 3. The believers in the three eye tradition say that Moses supplemented God's command by ordering the faithful who were encamped in the valley to turn their heads from the mountain. This they did, but took good care to uncover the eye that was situated in the back of the head. Moses, noticing this show of duplicity on the part of his followers, asked God to close the third or rear eye, and since that day the Israelites, in common with the remainder of humanity, have been forced to depend on two eyes only. "You never wrote to me, Brandon, and I thought I—"

"You feared I should do what you knew I would not. That's like a woman," and he laughed lightly. "But it's all over now, Minnie. I have completed my book and sold it to the Irvines for $1,300. The announcement of your engagement kicked my pride so hard that I had to do something desperate."

Minnie was a splendid actress.

"What?" craning forward, with one hand on her lover's shoulder.

"I might have killed myself," he remarked presently.

"I had too much pride." She was smiling now.

"But why have you come here again?"

"You never wrote to me, Brandon, and I thought I—"

They were 20 or 30 yards to one side, and kept along with him for perhaps 100 yards. Then they stopped, looked at him for a moment—a strange being he must have looked in their eyes—and bounded away at right angles, still stopping now and then to look back, till they disappeared in the long grass.—Youth's Companion.

THE ADVOCATE.

CONSISTENCY.

Sermon before Ebenezer Presbytery, by Rev. H. A. Brown, Moderator

"It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the wo death I unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." —Joh 6:63.

Beyond all representations must lie that which is represented. Jesus Christ was the representative of God as far as the author and giver of

Had He not spoken one single word, He would have accomplished the same purpose which He designed.

No one can be an exact representative of God but God Himself, for if he could then there would be two Gods, and as there are not two Gods, the only one who could give a true representation of God to the people was Jesus Christ, who was God, manifested in the flesh.

So the more one becomes like Christ, the more Godly will he be, and the greater will be his power to do good. As men use means in the realization of their designs, so does God do the same in the accomplishment of the plan of salvation. He used signs and symbols as well as words among the Jews because of their failure to grasp spiritual abstract truths in the beginning of their revelation, but as language grew and men could more readily grasp the obscure representations of spiritual ideas, so in the personal revelation of God on earth, the simple words of the New Testament were used for the clearer manifestation of God as the Savior of man.

Words have their good uses and their bad and they are good or bad according to the purpose and spirit in which they are spoken. So men are good or bad according as they think of their own minds. Words have their influences, as well as actions and even thoughts, though they may never be spoken, so mold the character as to have their effect on those with whom we meet and so become the greatest witness in the court of Heaven.

It was not the simple words of God that brought all nature into being, but it was the power behind the throne, used on chaos to bring forth this beautiful world, and when Christ tells us that the words He speaks are Spirit and Life, it is because they are the channels by which the Spirit and Life of Christ are conveyed to human minds for their soul's salvation.

Words then are the means used by God in saving souls, but they are ineffective unless God works through them.

So if our words are not accompanied by the power of Christ within us, they will be vain, and instead of being words used by God for saving souls they are words used by Satan for the damnation of them.

Hence the necessity of consistency not only in our outward actions but in every intent and thought of the heart.

The church is moving rapidly in its system of organized effort, but in the gathering in of so many into these bands, let us not fail to recognize the power of a consistent life in Christ, whatever else we may do.

The success of our life depends upon our personal efforts, backed by eminent piety, and the success of all Christian organizations depends upon the individual force, whose love and devotion to God shall send consternation among the enemies. If Sampson was so powerful with the jaw-bone and Samson did so much with his ox-goad, why should we not have the same privilege in calling down the forces from Heaven to the destruction of sin?

"But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment for by thy words thou shalt be condemned." If the theory of the conservation of forces be true, me thinks I can hear in the dim distance of space every wrong word coming on like the mighty rush of a mad mountain stream, yes, the very thoughts contents of my heart have set up a course of conduct that shall never withdraw its impression from all the universe, shall at last return making an exact correspondence to myself just as I am.

"Consistency thou art a jewel," has been well said, and were all of God's people as consistent as they should be, the visible church of Christ with all its minor organizations would be like the sparkling gem in a world of darkness. Christianity to-day is popular, it is not fashionable to be out of the church, but be that as it may, does that justify us to resort to all the various schemes imag-

Before the finished fruit come blossoms. But blossoms into fruit, blossom into fruit. And so a girlhood comes to womanhood and the womanhood to old age.

danger into safety and health, a medicine which has got no object. It is good for but one thing. It strengthens and invigorates, especially feminine, it promotes regularity of the monthly, allays irritation and inflammation, checks hemorrhage, removes pain, and purifies the whole delicate organism into a condition.

Almost all of the ills of womanhood are known as "female complaint."

And this disease really begins either at the time of puberty or

There are not three cases in a hundred of woman's peculiar diseases that Dr. Pierce's "Female Complaint" will not cure.

Thousands of grateful women have been rendered healthy and happy by its use, and their experience has been published in a pamphlet which has been included in Dr. Pierce's "Common Sense Medical Adviser."

When Dr. Pierce published the first edition of his "Common Sense Medical Adviser," he announced that after $60,000 copies had been sold at the regular price, $1.00 per copy, he would give away the remainder of the great amount of labor and money expended in publishing the book, and that it would be given away free. He is now distributing absolutely free, and will continue to do so, to any person who sends him a post-card, giving his name and address, and asking him to do so.

The First Edition is precisely the same as the Second.

It is in two volumes, and is bound in strong marlins paper covers instead of cloth.

inable for increasing the membership of churches, when there should be greater rigor in the examination of candidates, and a greater demand for consistency on the part of those who are already members? The church must be clean, her light brighter, and her standard of piety high, if she is to wield the power which God has designed for her to do.

May speak ever so much for Christ and it will be nothing but wisdom if every expression in His name is not backed by a corresponding living principle of the soul. God did not need thirty-two thousand but only three hundred men to route the Philistines, because they were the only ones of all that number who possessed the proper qualities for true and successful warriors. "He is not by might nor by power, but by His Spirit saith the Lord of Hosts." He who possesses the Spirit of God the most, he it who shall most glorify God and do the greatest good for mankind. Whether have we turned our eyes for strength? Have we not sought it in the numerical power of the church and its various branches? Have we not depended on the individual ability of ourselves, instead of looking absolutely to God? Brethren, if there will ever be any moral reform in our land it must be by the Christian first whose devotion to God in his consistency sets in motion all the nobler qualities of the soul, which gives it to the power of defense, and aggressive opposition to all sin in all forms. It is the power God alone can give who can successfully cope with evil.

Jesus won a perfect, complete victory because He in His incarnation did not sin in thought, word or deed, and the words He spoke had that quickening influence which saved His people from death and drove Satan and his advocates in to sudden flight.

Sin is destructive to us and how can we manifest the life giving power of Christ if we continually indulge in what is directly opposed to it? "Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it can not save, neither His ear heavy that it can not hear, but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His face from you that He will not hear." Brethren if we can claim to be followers or representatives of Christ here on earth, let us be so in thought word and deed, that the powers of Christ may be known in the moral reform of Christians, of the land in which we live, the salvation of souls, and the building up and strengthening of the walls of Zion. But to do this let us consider the demands of truth.

An author has said "without truth there can be no other virtue." The salvation of a man's soul depends upon the honesty of his heart. Much more does a Christian improvement depend on the same principle. A hypocrite is never honest, therefore you can never get him out of the church until you thrust him out, yet his life is manifested to all, and the church is injured as long as he is in it. But we are not all hypocrites to a certain degree at different times in our life?

May the time soon come when the glory of God will be manifested by a greater consistency on our part and the state and nation witness the life-ives? In this let us be honest with God, honest with ourselves and with those around about us, and profess to be no more and no better than what we truly are. Christian people, eminent for their piety and usefulness will sometimes fail to confess a fault, because it is too humiliating in comparison to their reputation in society, in business circles, and in the church. Even ministers will not acknowledge their besetting sin or their peculiar failings and will allow the church to grow cold because we will not take the advice or suggestions of others but remain stark blind to all our faults, as if we have already attained to perfection in all things.

Brother, the church can do without us at any time, but it can never make progress with us in it, until we are willing to cast off self, have our faults criticized and profit by it, basing our judgments on a simple devotion to truth and to the glory of God in our midst. We love to know the truth of all things outside of ourselves but when we must know the truth concerning ourselves, O, how painful it becomes. But if you will rise higher in the scale of being, if you will be a better man or a better woman, you must know the truth relation to yourself, not only in general, but specifically. We readily admit that we are sinners in need of the grace of God, but O, how unwilling are we to acknowledge our own specific in-consistencies! This is why our churches are dead spiritually. This is why there are distinctions in society in the church, because if any man loves the world the love of the Father is not in him, and how can we reach the souls of the lost until we are willing to come down to the valley of humility and sympathize with men as Christ did with them, being willing to be made all things to all men, that some may be gained from eternal destruction? If we are not willing to know the truth about ourselves, we consequently can not be devoted to it, and certainly we will make no progress in the Christian life.

Let us not yield to the light of truth by sad experience, but let it come like a flood into our dark hearts, to dislodge the gloom of pride, conceit, error, prejudice and all the forms of sin. But truth must be such a principle of our being, that it is not only spoken or partly spoken, but that it is thought spoken and acted. Horatius Bonar's words should be ours and let us adopt them at once:

"Think truly, and the thoughts shall the world's famine feed; Speak truly and each word of thine shall a man's life feed; Live truly and the life shall be a great and noble creed."

A man who thinks, speaks and lives the truth plays no part in hypocrisy either in the world or in the church. In the world he maintains a true relation to all people; in the church he is the honest confessor of all his weaknesses both in and outside of the visible organization, depending only on Christ for the complete, final redemption of his soul. He is like Paul ever seeking that perfect holiness which God has promised and will give at last to all who trust in Christ and which all must have before they can enter Heaven. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. The truth will never allow anyone to be satisfied with himself. Man is so horrified when guilty of sin and its consequent punishment, that he seeks for relief, it is true. If he believes the truth concerning himself, he will never rest until he is safe in his safety's fort.

Brethren, I appeal to the church for truth. If we are not Christians let us get out of it, if we are let us come up with better work. Let us do our whole duty as Christians, seeking the spiritual advancement of ourselves and consequently of the church and the entire community in which God has placed us, and let us never rest satisfied until we leave this sin-cursed world. Then the words that we speak will be spirit and life, because we are manifesting in our daily walk the power of God in Christ. The quickening influence of the Spirit of God will always be with us and we shall teach transgressors God's ways and sinners shall be converted unto Him. Brethren, we must let Christ work in us, by yielding up self, for as Mills, the evangelist tells us, we can only advance in character as we make definite sacrifices of self, and if we will not do so, why act the hypocrite? Why not be a true man or woman? and it also brings her child with the surest promise of happiness and successful manhood or womanhood.

And this is the debt we owe the mother with peace, strength and comfort, rather than by guilt of pulling it down and being stumbling blocks in the way of others.

May the time soon come when the glory of God will be manifested by a greater consistency on our part and the state and nation witness the life-giving power of Jesus in His people. Let us then, be more like Christ, so that in our representation of Him, we may manifest the true excellency of His infinite character, that the words He speaks through His people as agents, may fall with power upon the conscience and a great harvest of souls be gathered for eternity.

ADVOCATE PUBLISHING COMPANY.

Tuesday, November 19, 1895.

Maj L. C. Norman appealed to be Chairman of the State Democratic Campaign Committee this year when Kentucky was caught in the Republican tidal wave. Every little ear in the State is now barking at the heels of the man of whom they could not say enough in praise, when success crowned the efforts of this faithful party worker. There are a whole lot of these fellows who are blatant in their abuse of Maj. Norman, that are very much more responsible for party defeat than is the late Chairman of the Campaign Committee. The fact is, Maj. Norman was the superior intellectually, morally and patricially to the great majority of those who are engaged in this mud slinging business. One thing is beyond question, Mr. Norman both worked and voted for the entire State ticket. Can as much be said, truthfully, of all his detractors?

Hon. Jo. M. Kendall was here last Friday and Saturday for the purpose of ascertaining who would make the most efficient and acceptable postmaster for this place before recommending any one. Including the applicants and their immediate friends, about one hundred persons called on him and expressed a choice which Mr. Kendall noted, and he hopes by this method to decide the matter intelligently and to the best interest of all concerned.

Gov. Brown has called a special election for December 7 to fill the vacancy in the House of Representatives caused by the resignation of A. J. Carroll, elected from the Sixth and Seventh wards of Louisville.

Many Druggists say not medicine sells so easily and gives such universal satisfaction as Chappelair's Bachmien. The bottle is large, price small so it is a certain cure, for sale by Thos. Kennedy.

Sudden Death

On last Saturday night Mr. Mortimer Mylde aged 61 years, a native of New York, who has been living here with his friend Mr. Arthur Neville, died from general debility. Mr. Neville left with the remains on Sunday for New York for burial. It is said that the deceased owned a small estate and that it has been willed to Mr. Neville.

HORSE AND TRACK.

Geers thinks Star Pointer will be the king next year.

Saratoberry, 2 1/2, wears seven pounds of hobbles.

Rubinstein, 2 1/2, has won every race he has started in this season.

Ermont, 2 1/2, will make a short season in the stud, and then be prepared for a campaign in 1896.

The weanling sister to Frank Agan, 2 1/2, owned by Ross & Dickerson, of Madison, Ind., is a square trotter.

Some one has calculated that there were no less than 15,000 trotters and pacers trying for winter oats on the track this season.

At the National Horse Show Andy Welsh refused $5,000 for his fast ten-year-old Miss Bowerman, 2 1/2, by Wilton, and Bermuda Girl, 2 1/2, by Bermuda. The offer came from Ed. de Ceraso.

Mr. George W. Leavitt, who is now in Lexington for the horses of their owners two of the forty-six 2 1/2 trotters now in the list. They are Early Bird and Tomah. He says that he bought two others that could have done the trick if they had been allowed to do so—Larabee and Bingen, aged three and two years respectively.

Here is what a well known Kentucky horse dealer thinks of the situation: It is given in his own words: "What do I think of the horse situation? Why, I think we are going to see a great revolution within the next two years," remarked J. B. Doerr, the Louisville horse buyer, the other day, to a newspaper man, "and I'll tell you why... There has been a great falling off in breeding throughout the West, and as a consequence horses are getting scarcer every day, and prices West are advancing correspondingly. We have to pay from $10 to $20 more for them this year than last, and there will be a sharp advance before long, and within two years I expect to see ordinary horses higher than ever before. How do I account for it? Why, the question is easily solved. Exportation, increased population, and other changes will make the demand more active, and this, coupled with the decrease in breeding, is bound to have a marked effect. Then, too, most of the scrub stock has been picked up, and a better class of horses is bound to follow, and, of course, the public will have to stand the result.—Stock Farm.

The Chesapeake & Ohio Railway has added another beautiful novelty to its lists of attractive things, which it has so successfully used to advertise that splendid road and to please its thousands of friends. It is without doubt the prettiest thing of the kind ever used by a railroad in America. A bouquet of flowers holds on its nests a tiny but perfect thermometer, that one can keep track of the rain you want. In every way it is a real novelty and an ornament for any home. The idea is that of Mr. C. B. Green, the enterprising, popular and very successful Assistant General Passenger agent of the great Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. Send ten cents in a cent stamp to C. B. Ryan, Cincinnati, O., and receive one of these very desirable and desirable novelties.

They forwarded to us by express everything that was new, and we are now showing the very latest and newest ideas in Wraps and Jackets. Come and see them. It will be a rare treat to you, whether you need one or not.

DRESS GOODS.

We have just received from the East our fourth shipment of FALL DRESS GOODS. We had sold everything in this department that was desirable, and a telegram to our Dress Goods house brought us a lot of BAUCH CLOTHS, CHEVERONS, PLAIDS in silk and wool, and all SILK CREPONS, etc., that surpassed our fondest expectations. They are simply grand, and you know the price will be the lowest, as we never forget our motto: "UNDERBUY, UNDERSELL, CASH."

CLOTHING.

A word about CLOTHING and we will close. Our house is not large enough for us to carry as large an assortment as you will find in the large cities, but we carry all the choicest things in this line—all the money-savers for the people—and no garment in this stock has had time to get shop-worn. We keep them going out and coming in; they are always new and fresh. If you need anything in the Clothing line give us a look. Our knock-out competition, cash prices, will do the rest.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

Our Boots and Shoes were all bought before the advance in leather. Our prices get lower while others get higher. We make no misrepresentations to sell goods. Call and see for yourselves. We have every nook and crevice, both upstairs and in the cellar, full of Shoes and Boots, waiting to save you money when you come.

THE ADVOCATE.

REMINISCENCES

Of First Presbyterian Church at Mt. Sterling, Ky.

By H. C. Rainey.

I am the only man now living who was associated with this church fifty-five years ago. As an orthodox Presbyterian, I believe I was born into the church and was therefore a member of it for fifty-nine years—a communion can for 44 years—a deacon 15 years—a Ruling Elder 25 years and super-intendent of its Sunday School 35 years.

It will not seem strange, therefore, that I should feel like the captive Israelites when far away from their beloved Jerusalem. This church is my Jerusalem toward which my heart ever turns with affectionate yearning and the language of that heart is; "How can I sing the Lord's song in a strange land. If I forget thee, O! Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."

The heart has its own memory like the mind and in it are enshrined like precious keepsakes, the words and deeds of loved ones gone before. There come to us of the past voices whose tones are sweet and mild, singing a song almost divine.

I seem to hear, reverberating from those walls, the solemn strains of those grand old hymns sung by our forefathers and fore-mothers half a century ago—not artistically, which may be, in unison with the swelling tones of the grand organ, but "with the Spirit and understanding." Songs of genuine praise and adoration. Oh! With what earnestness, with fervor, what heartfelt gratitude they sang!

"Aye, our grace how sweet the sound,
Thou a wretch I'd see me.
I am lost but now I see,
Was blind, but now I see."

In those days many churches had an officer called the "clerk." It was his duty to "raise the tunes" and also to "line out" the hymns by reading tunes at a time. hymn books were scarce.

The regular clerk in this church was Mr. James Pollock. Instead of a tuning fork he used a small whistle which gave him the tone or pitch. It was a law student under Hon. R. Apperson, Sr., who was a Ruling Elder of the church. I stood in great awe over Mr. Pollock, believing him to be one of the great men of the world, never doubting that he was the author of that grand old poem, "Pollock's Course of Time." In the absence of Mr. Pollock, Mr. Gouil, a school teacher officiated as clerk.

Of those who preached in this house fifty years ago I recall the names are features of quite a number.

Rev. Joseph P. Howe I know nothing save by tradition. He was the first Pastor. His wife was a very large woman. A Mr. Wilson whom I met at Mayville, Ky., several years ago, told me that he and another young man once boarded an sled with Mr. Howe. The door to their room was a little narrow. Occasionally they would become somewhat boisterous in their play and Mrs. Howe would come in quiet them; but as she could not pass through the door they did not fear her. The house in which Mr. Howe lived stood on the North side of Locust St. about 70 feet East from the mouth of the alley which passes the Methodist church, and I, I believe still standing.

Another minister was Rev. Joseph C. Stiles, one of the most eloquent men the Presbyterian church ever produced. He lived for six months in a house which stood about 200 yards from High street in the rear of the present residence of Mr. J. R. Sharp. Such was his fame that this house could not contain the crowds that came to hear him preach. On one Sabbath morning the people came from every direction in carriages, buggies and wagons, entering the gate on Main street. After the service it was found that the vehicles were so crowded and interlocked that they could not be turned around. After some delay the fence in the rear of the lot was broken down and they passed out to Locust street. Soon after this the trustees of the church purchased a strip of land 12 feet wide, beginning at the North East corner of the lot and running to Locust street. About 1850 this land was sold to the Farmer's Bank and the proceeds placed in the hands of Mr. Strother D. Mitchell whose estimable widow, Mrs. Anne E. Mitchell and two children, R. A. Mitchell and Mrs.

L. T. Chiles are now members of the church. Mr. Mitchell used the money to build a cupola on the front of the church.

In 1835 Mt. Sterling suffered from a great fire. My brother, James S. Rainey, has told me that while standing in the street looking at the fire, his attention was called to three men in one of the buildings engaged in drawing water on the flames. These men were Henry Clay, Joseph C. Stiles and Richard H. Menefee, the greatest orators perhaps in the United States.

The father of Mr. Stiles was a wealthy Virginia planter and slaveholder and an infidel. He wished his son to enter the profession of the law, but he son had other views. When he entered the ministry his father disbelieved him and never became reconciled to him. Hearing that his father was nearing his end, he asked his congregation to unite with him in prayer for his conversion and then led them in a prayer so earnest and eloquent that many wept. Mr. Stiles died three or four years ago in Virginia. He must have been quite old.

Rv. Charles A. Campbell I remember well. In personal appearance he was very much like the pictures I have seen of Prot. Neander. He read his sermons very closely. He had one peculiarity which made a lasting impression upon my mind. During the reading of his sermons, he rubbed the right side of his face with his right hand continually. This always aroused my deepest sympathy. I thought he was suffering from neuralgia or toothache. His sermons were very long giving me time for two or three good naps. I wondered how he could preach so long while offering such intense physical agony.

In this respect Mr. Campbell was very much like another minister who preached in this house—Rev. J. D. Moore. One Sabbath morning he preached two hours and when he said that some of the people complained, he said "would give them something to complain of next time. He was as good as his word, for we received four solid hours.

I am not on I think five or six naps at day. Mr. Shawe was preparing to write a history of the Presbyterian church in Kentucky when he died in Cincinnati. All the valuable papers he had collected were lost.

Rv. David Todd, a very eloquent man Tennessee burned to death while a crowd of negroes, who did not like their father, stood by without making any effort to save them.

WHOLESALE & GROCERS—
MT. STERLING, KY.

Mrs. Sarah Meteor; Maj. George Black, the grandfather of Mrs. Tipton, now a member of this church; Richard Apperson, Sc., a Ruling Elder, who though dead yet speaks through his descendants, many of whom are now connected with the church; Dr. Joseph Wallace, the sweet singer, whose voice was like the notes of a flute; Mrs. Grooms, Mrs. Bushy, Mrs. Caldwell, Ebenezer Bishop, Wm. B. Miller and others.

Of these it may be said as of the parents of old "and they died." Died did I say? No! no, of each of them we may say as our own Longfellow has said of the great artist:

"Emigravit is the inscription on the tombstone

Dead he is not, but departed, for the Christian never dies."

Once they sang:

"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand
And cast a wistful eye.

To see the fair, happy land

Where my possessions lie."

Now life's labor well done, hope has become fruition. They have crossed the Jordan of death. Their weary feet have touched the shores of the heavenly Canaan and sweetly they rest under the shade of the trees.

MORUS MULTICAULIS BUBBLE.

The Spruce, from which Extract Disinfectant for Philadelphia.

In 1839 Philadelphia was only a big village, and everybody knew everybody else's business, and on Sept. 20th our people were enjoying all the excitement of a boom, as the great sale of "Morus Multicaulis" trees was to come off on this day.

In 1839 a society was formed here to promote the raising of silkworms and the manufacture of silk, and very handsome premiums were offered for the finest lots of cocoons and the best silk. But the interest languished until 1838, when a seductive stranger appeared in this city, and by representations of the profits to be made from silk raising started a veritable boom, which quickly extended to all the large cities, but here the fever was very virulent.

It was easy to get the worms from abroad, but the feeding of them was a serious matter. Each full grown worm ate 20 ounces of mulberry leaves per diem, and only one person could breed 1000 worms at a time. But the interest languished until 1838, when a seductive stranger appeared in this city, and by representations of the profits to be made from silk raising started a veritable boom, which quickly extended to all the large cities, but here the fever was very virulent.

It was easy to get the worms from abroad, but the feeding of them was a serious matter. Each full grown worm ate 20 ounces of mulberry leaves per diem, and only one person could breed 1000 worms at a time.

But the interest languished until 1838, when a seductive stranger appeared in this city, and by representations of the profits to be made from silk raising started a veritable boom, which quickly extended to all the large cities, but here the fever was very virulent.

When the trees began to mature the second year every one went crazy. The growing was in the nature of a gamble. One piece of ground would bear profusely; another would seemingly die out.

In the meantime every girl of any enterprise had her collection of cocoons, reeling apparatus and brushless for spinning, while every boy had his collection of caterpillars, and one in revenge for the slight sat down on and smashed a choice collection of Italian bar striped worms and was sued for the value, besides losing the heart of his Jemima forever.

The first sale of trees was on the Dock street sidewalk of the exchange. Old trees commenced at $5 cents apiece and then ran up to $2. Now an acre of ground would grow about 4,000 trees, so the growers had reason for getting excited.

Mr. Sykes, the author of "The Gold Cobblers" of Pease street, lived with his father in 1839 in a little board shanty on the southeast corner of Tenth and Fitzwater streets.

The lot was 50 feet wide, running west to Eleventh street. Old Sykes was wide awake and planted this ground with "Morus Multicaulis," and they grew abundantly. He had numerous offers, but held on till October, and then sold out for $7,600. He had been offered the ground for $450. His next crop in 1840 was valued at $2 for the crop, and the lot was run over for all planting purposes. Nothing but a granite will eradicate the roots, and they will close a well 100 yards away.

The great sale was held at Germantown on the 20th of September, 1839. Trees six feet high started at $3 and rose to $7. Philip Physick gave the final stroke to his fortune by buying $20,000 worth, and the proceeds of the sale came to $60,000.

In Baltimore the craze was as bad, and some prominent people ruined themselves. The Carrolls of Carrollton were credited with the loss of much of their possessions in this spending.

And now there began to be doubts and much figuring was done, and it became apparent that the native silk would cost about $4 more per pound than the imported, and not as good, and so the bubble burst. Ninety-five per cent of the speculators lost more or less. Some won. A prominent rich family here, whose daughters have married, into the nobility of Europe, made their start for affluence in the money made by their old Dutch grandmother on the little half acre garden on Chestnut street, Fifth street, right opposite Flower now Fallon street, while James Horn and Philip Physick lost $100,000 apiece.—Philadelphia Times.

SILK WORMS.

She Had Enough to Know All About

Naturality.

A minister's wife who conceived it to be her duty to give a kindly and motherly word of advice to the young couples who came to the parsonage to be married, one day went down into the parlor in advance of her husband for the usual little chat with a couple who had called "on important business," as the superintendent was a cordial one.

"I am about to take my family up to Saratoga Saturday morning," he said, "and have come to ask you as a favor to have the 8:30 train flagged at Yonkers, so we can get to Saratoga early in the afternoon. It would be extremely inconvenient for us to be compelled to go down to the Central station in order to board the train, and I think I can safely ask the favor of having it stopped for me at Yonkers."

The superintendent picked up a small slip of paper from his desk, glanced it over and said:

"Yes, that's what I used to tell Jim." said the bride.

"Jim?"

"Oh, he was my first husband."

"Indeed? Then, of course, you know what the duties and responsibilities of married life are. They are many and serious. Both husband and wife must learn to bear and forbear."

"You realize, of course, that marriage is a very solemn thing. It is not to be entered into lightly. It is, or ought to be, for life."

"Yes, that's what I used to tell Jim."

"Jim?"

"Oh, he was my first husband."

"Indeed? Then, of course, you know what the duties and responsibilities of married life are. They are many and serious. Both husband and wife must learn to bear and forbear."

"Yes, that's exactly what I used to say to Bill."

"To Bill?"

"Yes. He was my second husband."

"Oh, you must realize deeply the solemnity of marriage because of these experiences."

"Yes. I used to say to Jake that marriage was a laughing matter. Jake, my boy, was a jester."

"Indeed? My words must seem useless to you after?"

"Well, my words must seem useless to you after?"

WHY THE TRAIN STOPPED.

The Favor Asked of the New York Central by a Resident of Yonkers.

A minister's wife who conceived it to be her duty to give a kindly and motherly word of advice to the young couples who came to the parsonage to be married, one day went down into the parlor in advance of her husband for the usual little chat with a couple who had called "on important business," as the superintendent was a cordial one.

"I am about to take my family up to Saratoga Saturday morning," he said, "and have come to ask you as a favor to have the 8:30 train flagged at Yonkers, so we can get to Saratoga early in the afternoon. It would be extremely inconvenient for us to be compelled to go down to the Central station in order to board the train, and I think I can safely ask the favor of having it stopped for me at Yonkers."

The superintendent picked up a small slip of paper from his desk, glanced it over and said:

"Yes, that's what I used to tell Jim."

"Jim?"

"Oh, he was my first husband."

"Indeed? Then, of course, you know what the duties and responsibilities of married life are. They are many and serious. Both husband and wife must learn to bear and forbear."

"Yes, that's exactly what I used to say to Bill."

"To Bill?"

"Yes. He was my second husband."

"Oh, you must realize deeply the solemnity of marriage because of these experiences."

"Yes, I used to say to Jake that marriage was a laughing matter. Jake, my boy, was a jester."

Our Great Red Letter Clearance Sale

INAUGURATED

Saturday, November 23,

* * * * WAS A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS ! * * * *

True, we lost hundreds of Dollars, but the lucky purchasers are the gainers, and we are satisfied, for we have accomplished our purpose.

We advertised a genuine reduction on every article in our store. We have kept our word with the public and appreciate their confidence in our statement. Our store was crowded Saturday to overflowing. Many customers made frantic efforts to be waited on, and we must confess, for once, the throng was greater than we could handle.

Our Great Red Letter Clearance Sale Will Continue Until Further Notice !

Remember the selling price of every article in our store is marked in plain RED LETTERS at Reduced Prices, from which there will be no deviation. We propose to make this sale memorable, and prices shall no longer stand between you and the garment desired.
